A process of learning about a job seeker, so that the information may be translated into job tasks, settings, preferences, & support needs which will become the basis for creating a targeted job development list. Person Centered Job Selection concludes with the development of a Person-Centered Employment Plan (PCEP) with traditional supported employment or a career profile with IPS supported employment.

The process of creating employment opportunities and securing competitive integrated employment. This includes networking with and learning about businesses to help identify potential positions, that match what was identified in the PCEP as closely as possible, and aid in the application process. The goal is to match the skills, abilities, and interests of individuals with the work needs of the employer, either through open or negotiated positions. It includes the development of a job acquisition report with IPS supported employment.

Direct on-the-job support to help the person reach their highest level of competence at performing job tasks and successfully integrating into the workplace culture. Previously referred to as 30-, 60-, and 90-day outcomes in the OVR system.

Direct or indirect support or monitoring to help the person maintain their employment and consider opportunities for career advancement. Content of the specific long-term supports are defined in the current Long-Term Employment Support Plan or OVR Extended Service Plan if this is the first long-term support request following OVR funding. Commonly referred to as Extended Services in the OVR system.
